For Centuries the Scientific and Historical world has been searching for the Lost City of Norumbega. Those who care hope one day someone will devote enough time and effort to prove its location. Others don't care or bother to find out just what is being talked about. The history that is taught today, will not be the same history that is taught tomorrow after this book is read. Norumbega need not be searched for any longer. What is needed now is a Professional willing to open their eyes and see what is before them. Behold the land of Norumbega, the Fort of Norumbega and the lost city of Norumbega. The second biggest Archaeological Site on the Penobscot is the Lost Ancient Village of Negue. It has been wrongly claimed, it has been wrongly dedicated. There is talk of a Plymouth Trading House, there is talk of an even older Port Royal type trading house dating to as early as 1613, yet no one can plant a flag and claim this is Crownespoint, or Negu or even Negas. It exists. It is undisturbed after 400 years. Where are the professionals that other states and Countries have to verify and investigate these sites, and preserve them before they are lost? St. Sauveur is the first Jesuit Mission in the Country. It was attacked and burned by the British. Some claim it is located on Somes Sound. If so where is the proof? I found a site, that matches the original description and it isn't even located on Mount Desert Island.
