Irish Love Reborn Nancy Scott

Sarah, a single mother of a seven-year-old boy, finds herself in Ireland, attending the trial of her lost love. After seven years, she lets her son Ryan meet his Irish aunts and uncles, who knew nothing about him. Connor, a brilliant doctor and Ryan's uncle, is resentful of Sarah for keeping Ryan a secret. During the trial, he and Sarah clash, only to find that the electricity between them is strong. They fall in love, only to have it taken away when Sarah, Ryan, and Sarah's parents are in a car accident. Sarah's parents are killed. Sarah has amnesia and remembers nothing in Ireland. It is later that she learns the accident was no accident, but murder. Sarah does not remember anything and thinks her son Ryan is being silly talking about Ireland and his friends at the castle. Connor comes to Burlington, Vermont to take care of Sarah. He looks like her lost love, Jason, but does not know him. She thinks he has come to take her son from her. He stays by her side for three months, working in the hospital she is in, until, at last, she gets her memory back.
